PRIVATE TOUR

A house inspired by the feathered serpent, 35 minutes from Colima 71.

Architect Javier Senosiain took the feathered serpent of Mesoamerican tradition as his starting point. The Nest has winding structures, tunnels of greenery, hidden passages and coloured domes that catch the sun. Around it: gardens, reflecting pools and an oak forest.

We leave Colima 71 in a private SUV. The Nest is 35 minutes away, on the edge of the city. We walk it inside and out with a guide, who explains the bioclimatic design and the idea behind each structure.

The visit ends with a walk through Quetzalcóatl Park, next to the Nest. The park was created to protect green space in the northwest of Mexico City.
