PRIVATE TOUR

Five hours among the pyramids, with an anthropologist as your guide.

Teotihuacan was one of the largest cities in Mesoamerica. We walk the Avenue of the Dead, nearly two and a half kilometres long, between the Pyramid of the Sun, more than 60 metres tall, and the Pyramid of the Moon at its northern end.

Serpents are carved into the stone of the Temple of the Feathered Serpent. The anthropologist explains how the city was built and what is known about the people who lived in it. One question stays open: nobody knows what the city was called, or what language its people spoke.

On the way back, mezcal and Mexican snacks.
